

Webpage making is as easy as ABC

Gavin Record, Teacher, Crawford Adventist Academy, Willowdale, ON

In the world of education and technology, it can become quite overwhelming when one starts to consider the amount of software that is available for teachers. The main reason that I choose to write about TeacherWeb is because it is easy to use. This program can even work for those individuals who consider themselves to be computer illiterate.

In the past, I have always wanted to have a personal website for my parents and students, but I lacked both the resources and knowledge as to how one would create their own website. This barrier caused me to be extremely frustrated. One day, while reading a technology book, I stumbled across a website made for teachers entitled TeacherWeb. After searching the entire site, I immediately thanked God for answering my prayers and leading me to this website that met all my needs. Since my first encounter back in July 2003, I have been faithfully using TeacherWeb as a tool for communication with others. Like any other software program, TeacherWeb does have its advantages and disadvantages, which are listed below.

Advantages	Disadvantages
Updating is easy to do	Manual changes to the website may not always appear immediately
Very user friendly	Limited memory space available on website
Comfortable interface for parents	TeacherWeb may be too basic for the advanced user
Low cost is $34.00 for 12 months (as of March 2004)	Website may be erased if the monthly payments are missed
Designed for all grade levels	No chat capabilities
Ability to post grades (password access for parents)	TeacherWeb does not offer a 100% security factor for student grades and or personal information
Thirty day trial offer	Thirty day trial offer limits the amount of capabilities that the site offers

Although TeacherWeb has both advantages and disadvantages, I feel that it is a great tool for all teachers. Feel free to take a look at my website (Grade One), as well as, a great example of a high school teacher's website.
